Gromyko Bolsters Brandt's Hand

EONN, April 12 (UPI).—A strong statement by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in Moscow bolstered Chan-cellor Willy Brandt today in a controntation with opposition

The chancellor, flanked by Foreign Minister Walter Scheel, met the opposition leaders tonight to try to overcome their opposition to the non-aggression treaties Mr. Brandt signed with the Soviet Union and Poland in 1970. Neither side gave any details of the meet-

The Bonn government spokesman, Conrad Ahlers, said at a press conference that he believco the Gromyko statement would have a favorable effect on the opposition leaders at tonight's confrontation. The confrontation aimed mainly at trying to budge Christian Democrat leader Rainer Barzel from the flat "no" his party planned to give to the treatles in their present form.

The critical vote on ratification of the treatles is expected in the Bundestag, parliament's lower house, in early May. Mr. Brandt's coalition of Social Democrats and Free Democrats commands only one vote more than the 249 required to ratify the PARIS, April 12 (WP) .- France lent its preslige today to Communist demands for an immediate resumption of the Vietnam peace talks, which were unilaterally suspended for an indefinite period by the United States and South Vietnam on March 23.

A government spokesman told newsmen after the weekly cabinet session that "the French government, notably as host of the Paris conference, expresses the hope that the conference will esume its work without delay in order to achieve a settlement and assure the security and independence of the Vietnamese populations." Although neither the United States nor South Vietnamese delegations would comment on the French government statement, the allies rejected Communist demands that the talks resume tomorrow. WASHINGTON, April 12 (WP).—The United States firmly expressed its "displeasure" today with the French government statement calling on the Americans and South Vietnamese to return to the suspended peace talks.

The U.S. expression followed another meeting at the White House of the Washington Special Action Group that has been conferring daily on the Vietnam war.

Under-Secretary of State U. Alexis Johnson, after attending the meeting, summoned French Embassy charge d'affaires Emmanuel de Margerie to the State Department, to receive the

May I Level Of 69,000 Is Affirmed

By Carroll Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON, April 12 (WP) -President Nixon is determined to bring U.S. troop strength in Vietnam down to 69,000 by May 1, as promised, but he has made no decision regarding the next phase of the withdrawal program, the White House said today,

The President will make another decision on the withdrawal program "based on the circumstances" and make an announcement before May 1. press secretary Ron

Mr. Nixon is sending in more air and sea power to support the South Vietnamese, to protect American forces in South Vietnam and "to assure the continuance of our withdrawal program, Mr. Ziegler said.

Despite a continuing reduction of forces in South Vietnam, there are nearly 35,000 men abcard Navy ships offshore—a figure that has almost doubled in recent weeks—and more than 30,000 servicemen—mostly Air Force—in neighboring Thalland, Senata Minority Leader Hugh Scott, R., Pa., and House Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford. R., Alich., told reporters after a GOP leadership meeting with the President that the South Vietnamese are doing "well" in resisting the latest North Vietnamese attack and that the country supports the President in his use of air and sea power.

Conflicting Remarks Mr. Ford first raised the sonsibility that the next withdrawai announcement might be postponed. Decloring limit there "ims hever been a commitment in previous withdrawals that one would automatically follow," he said, however, that he was not suggesting a halt would be or-

"I don't think you can assume an thing at this point," he said. Sen, Scott said, however, that "the withdrawals are continuing, and to the best of my knowledge, and to the best of my judgment, will continue. Suitah'e announcements will be made at the President's discretion."

Attempting to clarify the conflicting comments. Mr. Zleyler said: "It is our intention and hope and policy to continue with troop withdrawals, but I will not predict what decision the President will make... the actions we are taking are to support the withdrawal program."

Since the beginning of the withdrawal program, the President has said his decisions were made on the basis of three factors: the level of enemy activity; the ability of South Vietnam to assume its own defense, and the willingness of the Communists to negotiate.

Mr. Ziegler has maintained since the pre-Easter halt of negotiations in Paris that they could be resumed at any time the Communist delegates want to negotiate seriously. He emphasized that when the history of this period is made known "the United States will not he found wanting" in efforts to achieve a peaceful settlement. The responsibility for the fighting rests with North Vletnam, he emphasized, "because of their failure to seek a negotiated scallement." Mr. Ziegler accused the North Vietnamese of resorting to propaganda "to divert attention from the failure on their part to ne-"They huilt up supplies and

EEC Commission Relaxes Stand in Talks With EFTA

-The Common Market commissicn has suggested several changes in the community's negotiating position with Britain's six partners in the European Free Trade the REC. It was learned today.

According to informed sources, the changes follow an inconclusive second round of negotiations with Sweden, Switzerland, Austria. Finland, Portugal and Iceland last month. It then became obvious that the Common Market would have to shift its ground to meet the target of winding up the talks by the summer.

The subsequent aim is for freetrade agreements to come into force with the six countries at the same time as Britain, Ircland, Norway and Denmark join the European Economic Community next Jan, 1 so that the EFTA nations do not suffer economic damage as a result of the enlargement of the EEC.

The main change advocated by the commission is that the community drop its demand for unilateral concessions from Austria Switzerland, Sweden and Finland for EEC farm goods.

This demand was included in commission's negotiating mendate at France's insistence. But the four have steadfastly pressed for reciprocal concessions for their farm produce. Major Proposals

The commission now urges that the farm sector should simply be left out of the agreements being negotiated with these four countries, although the subject could he reviewed at some later stage. The other proposed major change is that the community drop its demand for a three-

As part of the ratification process, the Bundestag's legal committee ruled yesterday that the treaties were in conformity with the West German constitution and did not rule out the possibility of peaceful reunification of Germany.

Whatever optimism there is, at least in Saigon and the battle zone to the northwest of the capltal, is very guarded. There are no indications that the enemy is moving forward as effectively. So long as there are 100,000 North Vietnamese, backed by some of the most advanced weaponry available, poised im positions throughout the South's bander regions, there will be no audible sighs of relief, officials said Tues-

The fear remains widespread that if the Communists have, in fact, committed themselves, as the U.S. commander, Gen. Greighton Abrams, said in an interview last week, "to a maximum effort... the half is sure to he temporary."

Indeed, many military men and intelligence officials believe that the Communists are prepared for several months of fighting, with pauses for regrouping and re-supply. The difference now is that the United States has beefed up its air and naval armada in Southeast Asia and the South Vietnamese are recovering from the initial blows.

Washington Post correspondent George C. Wilson reported Tuesday from the northern section that North Vietnamese troops were stalemated both in Quang Tri Province, where they have not breached South Vietnamese defensive positions in several days, and near Hue. In Binh Long Province, South Vietnamese troops moved a mile or so further down Highway-13 toward the encircled provincial capital at An Loc. The relief force, estimated variously at from 14,000 to 20,000 men, came under repeated shelling attacks by enemy soldiers, estimated roughly at about 5,000 men.

The Saigon troops did not, as they had hoped, link up with a small government force attempting to move south from the city. There is still about 10 miles to go and field reports indicate that Communist resistance to the advance may stiffen further.

The Binh Long front starts about 30 miles from Salgon and extends to the Cambodian border. The provinces to the north and south of Binh Long have also been infiltrated by elements of three North Vietnamese divisions. But engagements thus far have been scattered, although sometimes severe. Tuesday, the administration of sparsely populated Boduc district, en the Cambodian border in Phuoc Luong Province, was evacuated. Many civilians left last week. Sources said that the move was a concession to the Communists' superior strength in the victnity.

Elsewhere in the country, the South Vietnamese Command reported a rocket and mortar barrage against the isolated district headquarters of Dakto in the Central Highlands province of Kontum, always thought to be a principal target for the Com-

Israel Grounds El Al Until Labor Difficulties End

TEL AVIV. April 12 (UPI).-A special committee of cabinet ministers tonight ordered El. Al Israel Airlines, the national carrier, grounded until the line can straighten out labor troubles that have crippled its operations in the last three days.

Wildcat strikes by nearly 2,000 ground personnel earlier in the day prompted the government committee to meet in emergency session to deal with the crisis. Thousands of tourists have been stranded by the dispute.

Today's walkents were in sympathy with the company's aircraft maintenance technicians who have been ordered by the government to return to work.

Senate Panel Votes to Forbid Use of USIA Films Within U.S.

By Spencer Rich WASHINGTON, April 12 (WP). quest. 1 The Senate Poreign Relations Committee has voted to impose an absolute ban on all public showings within the United States of USIA propaganda films originally made for overseas use. Only Sen. Jacoh K. Javits, R., N. Y., voted against the prohibition as the committee continued its consideration of legislation to authorize $563 million for the State Department and $200 million for USIA for fiscal 1973. Impetus for the ban on public showings of USIA propaganda films arose out of the broadcast of a USIA film on Czechoslo-vakia as part of Sen James L. Buckley's regular monthly telecast to constituents last weekend. Sen. Buckley is Sen. Javits's colleague from New York

The disputed film was mad in 1968, and the Foreign Relations Committee chairman, J. William Fulbright, D. Ark., protested that existing laws barred public showing of USIA films within the United States. However, the Justice Department ruled that one provision of existing law made USIA films available to congressmen and said that it could do nothing to stop the Buckley showing.

Sen. Frank Church, D., Idaho, offered the amendment to the anthorization legislation forbid-ding any USIA materials to be disseminated within the United States. Sen. Church said that the amendment made it clear that, while members of Congress. newsmen and the public could peruse USIA materials upon request, the materials were not to be distributed, broadcast or telecast or shown in movie houses. He said that this would close the alleged loophole, which had allowed Sen. Buckley not only to inspect the film and view it himself, but to broadcast it.

Meanwhile, Sen. Buckley's office revealed that the USIA press chief, William Gavin, a former contributor to National zine headed by the senator's brother, is leaving the USIA Friday and will join Sen. Buckley's staff as a speechwriter.

In another development, USIA confirmed that Bruce Herschen-sohn, a USIA official who called Sen. Fulbright "naive and stupid" in an interview on the Buckley telecast during which the Czechoelovakia movie was shown, had been awarded the highest USIA service medal when he subsequently resigned. Mr. Herschensohn resigned after his attack on Sen. Fulbright.

Butz Receives Message

Brezhnev Stresses His Desire For Serious Talks With Nixon

Soviet Communist party leader, Leonid I Brezhnev, has told a U.S. cabinet member that hs wants "a maximum of substantive discussions" with President Nixon during their summit meeting here next month.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz also indicated today that, after a talk with Mr. Breahney last night, he felt that the current intensification of U.S. air raids over North Vietnam would not undermine the summit meetling. Mr. Butz described his 90-minute conversation with Mr. Brezhnev as "frank and warm and open."

The secretary returned to Washington tonight carrying Mr. Brezhnev's personal message to Mr. Nixon proposing "a minimum of ceremony and a maximum of substantive discussions" when the President arrives here on May 22.

Mr. Butz also indicated today. before his departure, that Mr. Nixon's visit could well result in an agreement on long-term Russian purchases of U.S. grain at a level of up to $200 million an-

Soviet Effort Seen

The Brezhnev-Butz meeting, the first between the Soviet leader and an American official since 1964, and Russia's desire to conclude a big grain deal were apeffort to create an atmosphere of general openness and optimism for next month's summit conference.

The Defense Ministry news Krasnaya Zvezda (Red Star), took advantage of today's 11th anniversary of the world's first manned space flight by Yuri Gagarin to praise the current U.S.-Soviet talks on joint space

Soviet academician Leonid L Sedov described the talks as "successful" and predicted that Russian and foreign specialists would jointly man space laboratories "in the nearest years."

Another pro-American note was ounded today by the Soviet Union's top expert on the United States, Georgi Arbatov, at a memorial meeting honoring President Franklin D. Roosevelt on the 27th anniversary of his death.

Mr. Arbatov, director of the Institute of the U.S.A., praised Roosevelt as a "political realist" who saw the advantage of cooperation and understanding with the Soviet Union.

American journalists, who attended the memorial ceremony at the House of Friendship, believe that it is the first time that U.S. correspondents have been invited to such a meeting.

Proposed Lead-in-Gas Limit Called Too High by Coalition

By Victor Cohn

Ghetto children will be needlessly poisoned by airborne lead until at least 1984 under a federal proposal that pretends to get the lead out of gasoline as swiftly as possible, a new coalition of labor, environment and urban groups charged yesterday.

Crammed into auto-clogged neighborhoods, inner-city children continually absorb lead from cars and also eat lead "dustfall" in dirt, the 20-group coalition

Bolstered by restimony from health experts, it made one of three severe attacks on the new Environmental Protection Agency rules as EPA opened hearings prior to making the rules final after May 22.

The diverse but, if it stays intact, potentially powerful new coalition includes the United Auto Workers, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the National Tenants Organization, National Welfare Rights Organization, Black Survival, Center for Community Change and 11 environmental groups, among them the Sierra Clnb, Friends of the Earth and Zero Population Growth.

The coalition and New York City complained on health grounds about the new gasoline standards—intended to eliminate lead over a 10-year period start-ing in 1974. Major gas stations would have to start selling a socalled no-lead gas-with .05 gram of lead a gallon-and lead would gradually be phased out of other > Engelhard Minerals and Chemicals, manufacturer of devices to clean enhaust gases in future cars, testified that the standards would still leave so much harsh lead in gas that their sensitive controls would soon fail.

Dr. Kenneth I. Jagel of Engelbard asked EPA to permit no more than .03 rather than .05 gram a gallon, saying: "We are convinced this will not impose insuperable difficulties on gasoline refiners or distributors.

Too Expensive

EPA-and refiners and distributors-have said it would be too expensive to get all lead out of even "non-lead" gas, since leaded and non-leaded gas are alternately transported in tha same pipes and trucks.

In fact, P. N. Gammelgard, senior vice-president of the American Petroleum Institute, testifled that the .05 gram limit would "have a potentially severe impact" on the oil industry. He urged thet it be made a more lenient .07 gram and that refineries be permitted to average their lead use on an annual basis in other gasolines.

Auto-makers tended to agree with the Engelhard company on the need for as little lead as possible in gasoline. Meanwhile, in another act of hearings, EPA heard American Motors and Nissan Motors join Volvo and Volkswagen in saying they cannot meet 1975 model year exhaust regulations before 1976.

The Measure of Success in Vietnam

proaches its third week, the ebb and flow nf battle are such as to make premature any disinterested and definitive judgment on which side will, in a conventional military sense, "win." That Hanoi would score conspicuous early gains was to be expected. The test is whether these gains can be sustained. North Vietnam is said to have committed upward of 50,000 soldiers, using such heavy Soviet equipment as they could procure-and could move south; other divisions are apparently poised near the various battlefields. But Saigon is not defenseless. It has a long-trained million-man army fitted out with immense supplies of heavy American equipment, plus o million or two civilians under arms, and it is supported by an American air armada of unprecedented power and size. North Vietnam, of course, has no airpianes to speak of.

If the outcome of the hattle remains uncertain, so is Hanoi's purpose in starting it. The view publicized by the administration is that North Vietnam is making "one last throw of the dice": an all-out effort to demoralize South Vietnam further undermine American public toleration of the war, and force an election-minded President, with a Moscow summit ahead, to sue for peace in Paris. By this reckoning, there has been no Tet-like "general uprising" in the South, not, as some suspect, because Hanoi judges the moment not yet ripe but because the Viet Cong never recovered from the lossee dealt it in Tet in 1968, and thereafter. * * *

Prophecies are unnecessary: Events will show whether the administration view is more hardheaded analysis or merely tha latest exercise in official wish-fulfiliment. We note, though, that the last-throw-of-thedice theory, comforting as it is to its American proponents, is quite inconsistent with the record of the Communists in Vietnam. Perhaps they have bet unwisely on their chances in this particular battle. But they have fought for decades to expel a series of foreigners from their homeiand, in the process surviving setbacks and suffering losses that stagger the Occidental imagination. To helieve that they now will gult or otherwise be rendered incompetent to continue their struggle flouts everything we thought Americans had learned in Vietnam.

If Hanoi "wins"—say, if it holds a northern province or two into the spring, or panics other provinces, or revives strong opposition to President Thien in Saigon-then it may try to secure better settlement terms from Mr. Nixon than he has so far offered.

As the North Vietnamese offensive ap- But-no less possible-if Hanoi does not so "win," then it will hardly head for Paris, If the record is any guide, the North Vietnamese will simply start preparing for the next round, figuring that Washington will have less heart and license to use its airpower by the time that round begins. In the interval, Saigon would presumably be tending to the improvement of its own defenses or it would be moving in a political direction that might obviate another military showdown with Hanol. Who can say?

> More likely than not, the political/military results of the current battle will be mixed and debatable: Mixed and debatable enough to sustain a range of judgments, including a presidential judgment that Saigon has finally demonstrated its worth and will to fight its next big battle on its own, Mr. Nixon has advertised as never before-and to questionable military effect-Saigon's reliance on American airpower. But that ie only one element in an overall picture that undeniably includes a formidable South Vietnamese ground effort as well.

> "Vietnamization" remains a term of art. not a description of reality, as long as the American air component is as large and, in crunches like the current one, as crucial to Salgon as it is. Nonetheless, whatever President Thieu's failings-and they are not in short supply-he has felt enough confidence to put arms in the hands of a great many of the peasants of South Vietnam: These people are the "sea" in which the guerrilla "fish" should supposedly be swimming at their ease, according to Maoist theology. The extent to which the Thien government might conceivably improve its military performance-or for that matter, aiter its political posture in respect to the Communists-if it did not have the "crutch" of American airpower, is a question too se'dom pondered aloud.

Domestic critica of Mr. Nixon on the war issue should be even more eager than his supporters are to see him follow up his iast-roll-of-the-dice theory with a firm judgment, once this roll is over, that Saigon has "a reasonable chance" to carry on its war by itself. Such a judgment alone can provide the President a hasis for halting American combat participation and for offering Hanoi a troop-POW exchange. Any other presidential judgment would constitute an open admission to the American electorate in November, and to the Kremlin in May, that the Nixon policy in Vietnam has falled.

Wilson's Gift to Heath

Britain into the European Common Market nn schedule next Jan. I has heen eased, perhaps decisively, by a dramatic open split in the opposition Labor party. The resignation nf deputy leader Roy Jenkins and several colleagues from Labor's "shadow cabinet" should insure Mr. Heath comfortable majorities in Parliament for the legislation necessary for British membership in the European Economic Community.

So long as the 69 Labor members who had originally supported Common Market entry in principle last October accepted party nrdere to oppose the enabling legislation, Mr. Heath's Tory government was in danger of falling on a key House of Commons vote, leaving Britain still outside the community. Mr. Heath survived one test by only eight votes when 20 of his Conservatives either voted against the government or abstained.

But many among the 69 will now follow the lead of Mr. Jenkins, Harold Lever and George Thomson-thres of the most respected of Labor's leaders—and will vote their pro-European convictions for the rest of the legislative marathon. Their support should enable Mr. Heath to withstand Tory defections comfortably and to ignore Uister Unionists, who threaten to oppose him on Common Market entry out of hostility for his new policy for Northern Ireland.

After taking their stand for joining the market in the October vote, Mr. Jenkins and his colleagues were prepared to rejoin the Prime Minister Heath's task of getting Labor majority and oppose the remaining legislation in the interests of party unity. But they could not tolerate the most recent turnaround by party leader Harold Wilson, who helped ewing his shadow cabinet behind a resolution submitted by Tory rebeis for a nationwide referendum on Common Market entry.

> Labor's party conference last fall had overwhelmingly rejected a Common Market referendum and the shadow cabinet had voted it down again last month. But the temptation to exploit for short-run political gain the dublous example set unexpectedly by President Pompidou in calling a French referendum on the issue of community enlargement proved too strong for Mr. Wilson to resist.

> The predictable result is the open party split that Mr. Wilson supposedly had been ready to sacrifics almost anything-including principles—to avert. This split may well prove harder to patch np tban Labor's bitter division over unilateral disarmament in 1960-61. An indefinite period in which Labor's well-known capacity for self-destruction has free reign cannot be healthy for British

> The only constructive effect—and this is the supreme irony of the whole episode-is that it probably will insure Britain's smooth passage into the European Economic Community, the very event Mr. Wilson was trying by his latest turnaround to prevent. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Testing Vietnamization

If it becomes clear that Saigon cannot hold Hanol's attacks for long, this test of Vietnamization could be disastrous for President Nixon. If he felt he had to send in more American troops the war would become a crucial issue, and the least his Democrat opponents would say is that he had fatally miscalculated. They would then have an issue which would at last enable them to turn to account Mr. Nixon's continued personal unpopularity, and explode his nascent reputation as an international peacemaker,

The Endless Dilemma

By James Reston

WASHINGTON - The military crisis in Vietnam has at least clarified the policy of the Nixon administration. In the name of protecting the withdrawal of American troops and of obtaining the release of U.S. prisoners, the President is now directing a massive air offensive against the enemy in order to prevent the defeat of the South Vietnamese Army and the overthrow of the

Salgon government,
This is at least a policy, but it is not a policy for getting out, but a policy for staying in, not. a policy for defending our troops, but a policy for defending Gen. Thien's command and his regime. It is easy to see the political logic for Nixon in this course of action. Without the intervention of the U.S. Air Force, the South Vietnamese, though they have an army of 1,200,000 men and a militia half that size, might very well be overrun by the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong, and this would be a spectacular failurs for the President's policy and a blow to his chances of re-election.

Stop Pretending

It is even easy to see the logic of his determination to smash the North Vietnamese invasion of South Vietnam and avoid the final crash of his policy and his aliles, but at least the President should state these objectives for the Congress and the people, and not pretend that he has to revive this savage counterattack in order to get the troops and prisoners back home.

The argument for the air war, like the arguments for the U.S. invasion of Cambodia and Laos, is that this operation will not only assure the withdrawal of our iast 90,000 men, but force the enemy to settle on our terms. But even after the enemy's offensive is turned back, as it undoubtedly will be, he will still be free to retreat into Cambodia and Leos and across the DMZ.

To achieve the President's war the enemy's main units must be destroyed and cut off from future supplies from the Soviet Union and China, and even the most optimistic planners here do not expect that.

Barry Goldwater has at least seen the flaw in the President's policy. He would carry the bombing to Haiphong. He would risk trying to cut the Soviet and Chinese war materiel before it could get to the battlefield, and also get behind the enemy divisions, now all but one in the South, and block their line of retreat.

Risk of War

Of course, this could risk war with both Moscow and Peking, but at least hs does not fool himself that the enemy will quit and negotiate on our terms unless Hanol has no way to retreat and supply itself for another offensive later on.

Short of trapping and destroying the enemy and cutting him off from more Soviet and Chinese arms later on, the President's policy of backing the South Vietnamese with air power whenever they get in trouble does not "end the war," which was Nixon's promise, or free the United States, which is his hope, but traps him and the Air Force in a war that is directed by Hanoi and Saigon.

If his objective is simply to end the war and get the troops and the prisoners hack home, he can regotiate that very quickly. It would be dangerous and embarrassing, and there are solid arguments against it, but that is the alcohol, but whether we in the policy of most of the Democratic candidates for the presidency, and it could be done. But if his policy is to prevent the conquest of South Vietnam and the defeat of the Thieu government, then the consequences of that policy should be faced. For if Nixon is not really going to put the South Vietnamese on their own, giving them the tools to see if they can finish the job, but is going to back them with air power whenever they get in trouble, then all the South Viet-namese have to do to assure our continued presence in the air over the battlefield is to demonstrats their inability to defend them-

Embarrassing

This has been so obvious for so long that it is almost embarrassing to go over it once more, but the fact is that the administration is now dispatching more and more naval and air power to Vietnam -without telling the Congress what it is doing-and complaining about the Soviet supply of arms to Eanoi, while negotiating disarmament agreements, and cultural agreements, and trade and space agreements with the Russians, so that the President can announce them in triumph when he goes to Moscow on May 22.

The contradictions in all this are both obvious and painful. You can defeat the North Vietnamese if you cut off their retreat and their supplies, and you can get your troops and your prisget out all tha way, but you can't defeat them or get out by withdrawing part way and leaving them to retreat, while you run for re-election on the ground that Russians and tha Chinese.

Marijuana Questions

"The United States might be willing to finance experiments in legalized marijuana in smaller countries." According to the IHT, March 24, this unique and generous offer was made by a prominent U.S. representative at a recent narcotics symposium sponsored by the Council of Europe.

The rationale: "If marijuana was legalized in the United States. the policy would be irreversible, whereas smaller nations could be more flexible and reversa the course if the experiment turned ont badly."

A few of the many questions raised by this surprising move: Who said that such a policy would be reversible in a "smaller nation"? What expenses would be covered? The extremely high costs of establishing adequate social-psychiatric and pedagogic services for the treatment and rehabilitation of young individuals who had become dependent upon cannable? The cost of the institutions, the personnel, the equipment? Compensation for the loss of educational opportunities? For the misery of youngsters and families? For the suicides? Perhans costs for covering the production, importation and sale of ths drug? We should know by now that the spread of use-and abuseof any dependence-producing drug is mainly dependent upon two factors: social acceptance and availability. The question is therefore not whether cannabis is more or less dangerous than

Western civilization want to add to our alcohol problems-which are very far from being under control-a new set of similar problems caused by the mass con-

Not unimportant in this context are the following quotations from the report of the International Narcotics Control Board on its work in 1971: "It is worthwhile to recall that since the early years of international narcotics legislation recognition of the need to subject this substance [cannabis] to control has come predominantly from those countries with the iongest experience of cannabis abuse." And further: "Much, if not most, of what passes for cannabis in the illicit market, particularly in North America, is of low grade and it is often adulterated. In other parts of the world the potency seems generally to be appreciably higher."

At what time did it become ethically justifiable to undertake risky experiments with members of other nations to avoid the risk at home?

Misreading the Primaries

The Instant-Analyzer

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON .- For the journalists like myself whose heads have been set spinning by the dizzy results of the first four Democratic presidential primeries, reading last Sunday's Gal-lup Poli (IHT, April 11) was like being scaked with a bucket of tick from the control of the control cold water. The hardest thing for any newspaperman to learn, if my own case is any example, is how to wait for the story to end before lesping into print to tell its In some part of our heads, we know that the Democratic nomination will not be voted until July in Miami Beach. But we're so afraid of being scooped, or something that we treat each presidential primary not as a clue to the outcome but as the solution to the mystery. Looking back at my own reporting this past month, it reads something like this

• New Hampshire: Muskie weak, McGovern does well. ● Florida: Wallace stuns Democrats, Humphrey shows some pull, Muskie and McGovern

● Illinois: Muskie clobbers McGovern, sets new victory plan. Wisconsin: McGovern triumphs, Wallace does well, Humphrey hurt and Muskle (to quote my favorite wrong-headed instant-analyzer, myself) "ap-parently demolished."

After all these alarums and excursions, now comes Dr. Gallup with a survey of a national cross-section of Democratic voters taken between the times of the Illinois and Wisconsin primaries showing almost no movement at all during the previous month in the standings of the various Democratic contenders.

Humphrey still leads the pack, with Muskie a strong second, Wallace third and McGovern well back in fourth place. If the Gallup Poll is correct—and there is no reason to doobt it—the first three primaries left the preference of Democratic voters for the nomination essentially unchang-

Perhaps with that reminder in mind, and the next pair of pri-maries, in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, two weeks away, we can catch our breaths and collect our thoughts.

Those of us who thought, as Muskle did, that the early primaries were likely to be decisive this year were clearly in error. This is not like 1968, when Richard Nixon ciriohed the Republican nomination by running George Romney out of the first primary in New Hampshire,

West Virginia in May and could not thereafter be headed. But it's more likely to be another 1964, when Barry Goldwater's opposition carried him all the way to California in June before succimbing It may even be another 1952, when the Taft-Fisen hower battle raged through all the primaries, only to be settled finally, on the floor of the convention. The early 1972 primaries have told us several interesting thing. They have indicated that the voters who are taking part (who, as Frof. Austin Ranney reminds us in a timely article in the new American Pobtical Science Review, are not necessarily typical even of the total electorate of their states), are in a mood of rebellion against political anthority and are ready to support "protest candidates" as dissimilar in ideology as McGovern and Wallace.

The primaries may indicate that McGovern and Wallace have the knack, by personal campaigning and/or organization work, of expanding their natural vote base in the primary states. while Humphrey and Muskie and their organizations have failed to convert their latent support into votes.

Don't Exaggerate

But we should not exaggerate the significance of the primaries They have been more expressive voters' anti-Establishment sentiments than indicative of their final candidate preferences. In part because Mr. Nixon has concealed himself so thoroughly from the campaign, few Democratic voters seem to be thinking about the person they want to send out against him in Novemher Humphrey and Muskie have both tried to turn their minds to that question, and both have

There's nothing to prevent the voters from using all the upcoming primaries simply to "send them a message" about their unhappiness with the way the war, the economy, the schools and the communities are being managed. But the guess here is that as convention time draws nearer, the Democratic voters will begin to focus on the question of an opponent for Mr. Nixon, If they don't, certainly the delegates in Miami Beach will have to face up to that choice. In the meantime, the advice from this corner-which I will attempt to practice as well as preach-is to resist the temptation to regard each primary as definitive. We have, yet, a way tion as the Democrats move closer to a nominating convention at Miami Beach which promises to be bloodier than 1968, and Humphrey backers are once again drooling over the prospect of a dream" ... Humphrey - Kennedy ticket.

Promoters of the Humphrey-Kennedy ticket have a scenario that looks more plausible than 1968: By agreeing to play second fiddle to Humphrey, Kennedy would bank impressive political credit with rank-and-file politi-cians, and also rehabilitate himself with millions of voters for whom the Chappaquiddick tragedy remains a moral bar to a nnedy presidency. Moreover, these promoters say, Humphrey might make a private, one-term agreement with Kennedy. If elected vice-president, Kennedy would be assured of the presidential nomination in 1976.

Kennedy privately dismisses all such blandishments as political poppycock. In the first place, one-term agreement would gravely embarrass Humphrey if it ever became public. More important, it would be totally meaningless. If elected vicepresident, in short, Kennedy would be tied in for eight years, an enforced absence from freewheeling political activity which could permanently undermine any claim he had as leader of the Democratic left.

More threatening, however, would be Kennedy's position if ths Humphrey-Kennedy ticket lost. That would confirm the considerable suspicions that Chappaquiddick, far from fading as tween now and then.

Thus, all prospect of a Humphrey-Kennedy ticket remains today exactly what it was four years ; ago-not a dream ticket but aniimpossible dream.

But despite these facts, Ken-nedy is quite aware that the end result of the party's tortuous presidential primaries, entering their second phase with Massachusetts and Pennsylvania on April 25, could conceivably in a genuine draft-Kennedy movement, not for vice-president but: for the presidency. Would he

If the alternative is a splinter, ed party, resulting from irreconcilability of the fanatically lovel forces of Sen. George McGovern and the traditional party and labor forces of Humphrey and Sen. Edmund Muskie, the answer is surely yes.

No Choice

As Kennedy reasons, he would have no choice, even though he knows that a Nixon vs. Kennedy campaign would be waged not on such issues as the economy or tha war but on the issue of Kennedy's morality and fitness to serve. As of today, in answer to a genuine draft based on the presumption that only Kennedy could hold the left and the old guard-organized labor forces together, he would accept.

That is Kennedy's answer to why, if he means what he says about not wanting to be drafted. he does not issue a Sherman-like statement that he would not run if nominated, or serva if elected. In the unlikely event of 2 genuine draft, Kennedy intimates argue, such a statement would have no credibility.

In short, as the flawed legates of Kennedy mystique, Teddy Kennedy moves toward the climactic Miami Beach convention in a fatalistic mood. That mood is unlikely to change be-

If we in America, instead of forbidding all alcoholic drinks, in our forthright Anglo-Seron fashion, had limited Prohibition in the insidious Latin manner to one scapegoat drink, what would Prohibition have meant? Undoubtedly, the suppression of rum; and rum might still be unobtainable, its loss unfelt because of the plenitude of alternatives. may be that we who have eschewed absinthe, on orders from above, may still be absorbing wormwood in another form without knowing it.

In srchaic German, wormwood is Wermuth, in other words vermouth. It would seem to be evident from its very name that vermouth must originally have contained wormwood. Does it still? Probably not more than a score of persons in the world could answer that question-the two or three in each of the hig vermouth manufacturing companies entrusted with the secret of their formulas. Each has its own, and they are not divulged. If any vermouths still contain wormwood, the Italian brands would seem to be its likeliest bearers, for the tradition of wormword-flavored drinks goes back far in Italy. The ancient Romans had their vinum absintiatum, though it could not have been as strong as absinthe, for they were ignorant of the art of distillation, which was presented to Europe by the Saracens, as is evident from the fact that the still is known in European languages by its Arabic name-al

Sugar Lump

I first made acquaintance with absinthe myself in New York during Prohibition. I seem to remember vaguely that an absinthe cocktail existed then, but what was in it I have no idea. I used to drink absinthe alone. The shimmering green liquid was poured into the bottom of the glass; a slotted silver "spoon" was laid across its top and a lump of sugar was placed on the spoon; one then dripped water, drop by single drop, upon the sugar, which melted through the filter into the absinthe clouding it slowly. When the lump had disappeared enough water had been added and it was ready to drink. It was delightfully subtle and silky, a far finer drink than the substitutes of today, whether they are flavored with licorice or

Genuine absinthe manufactured hy the Pernod company, which could not sell absinthe at home, could be had in London when I was living there, between 1928 and 1930. It was the cause on one occasion of what I considered at the time a distinctly disappointing evening, and this story, Mr. Devine, I really must ask you to keep entirely to yourself, The American advertising man with whom I was then sharing an apartment in Bloomsbury Street and myself had picked up a couple of girls. Our intentions were entirely dishonorable, but so, believe, were theirs. On the way to our flat we passed the shop which habitually supplied me with absinthe, and I bought bottle, with the idea that it might contribute to friendliness.

My friend and I were aghast when the girls, dismissing as sissifled our recommendation to their drinks with water, downed several bearty gulps of straight absinthe. We then sep-arated into two couples in our respective rooms, but before I could proceed to the natural development of the special relations existing between our two great English-speaking nations, friend's girl became deathly sick and my girl took her home. "Elizabeth I." a play by Paul Foster, with music by David Sheridan Spangler, directed by John-Michael Tebelak, was panned by Clive Barnes: Ahout five years ago a young playwright, Paul Foster, offered an amazing documentary view of Tom Paine. Part ballad, part biography, part TV apectacular, the entire ma-chine worked in an astonishingly theatrical way. Now Mr. Foster has applied much the same technique to that overdramatized Queen of England, Elizaheth I. But somehow it doesn't work. The thing that seemed to work against the play, in Barnes's view. was Mr. Foster's "obscurantism" and the 'meanderings

In "Tom Paine" he had the collaboration of Tom O'Horgan, who perfectly understood his method and underpinned it with precisely right directorial Tebelak does not seem to have that gift." However Barnes had kinder words for Robbie Anton's ("superb") scenery, the costumes by Susan Tsu, and the music by David Sberidan Spangler. As for the acting, it was "good without being as strong as it should bave been." The play is at the Lyceum

> "Eunnehs of the Forbidden City," a play by Charles Ludlam, directed by Mr. Ludlam, won praise from Mel Gussow: "Taking old movies, myths, legends, forgotten history, the detritus of extinct civilizations (such as ours .- Ludlam, as playwright, director, and ector, creates extra-vagant and original entertainment. His new work is a comic epic about Tsu Hsi (1834-1908), dowager Empress of China. Banners and furbelows, teeny umbrellas teetering on long poles, wigs like puff pastry, gilded sneakers and combat boots-plus an occasional coach, sampan and palanquin—colorfully evoke this fantastical Oriental empire. KHD Proposes Lower Payout

Lower earnings forced Kloeckner-Humboldt-Deutz (KHD) to propose a dividend of 6 deutsche marks, or 12 percent of par value, a share for 1971, down from a previous 16 percent, the company says. The last fiscal year was KHD's first to end on Dec. 31. Previous fiscal years had ended mid-year. KHD has not given profit figures. The economic slowdown, last year's revaluation and wages costs that exceeded pro-ductivity growth are cited as reasons for the lower payout proposal.

VW. Peugeot Plan Units in Nigeria Volkswagenwerk and Peugeot are planning to build anto-assembly plants in Nigeria. VW says it has signed a preliminary agreement with the Nigerian government for a plant in Lagos, the capital. Further details remain to be worked out. Peugeot reports it has been selected by the gov-ernment to build a 57-million plant at Kaduna, in central Nigeria. The company expects the contract to be signed soon. The plant will assemble 10,000 vehicles annually. The French firm will have a 40 percent interest in the project, the government 35 percent and local interests the remainder.

Dai Nippon to Offer More Shares Dai Nippon Printing Co. plans to incresse its capital to 11.2 billion yen from 10.5 billion through a public offer on May 31 of 15 million shares at the market price. Proceeds will be used in part to help financa modernization of production facilities, according to the company, share of Homburg. The company of Dai Nippon estimates its net profit in the half-year ending May 31 at 2.75 billion yen, up from sharing notes for about £8.5 million.

2.5 billion yen a year earlier. The firm expects to pay an unchanged dividend of 4 yen a share for the May term. Dal Nippon has also published ita first consolidated financial report. It shows profit totaled 5.669 billion yen for the year ended Nov. 30, 1971, on sales of 135 billion yen. The company claims it is the world's largest printing concern on the basis of its consolidated turnover. In Pebruary, 1971, Dal Nippon floated a 315-million convertible bond issue in Europe. So far, 51 percent of these debentures have been converted into the company's common stock, Dai Nippon says.

Texas Gulf Sulphur Suits Settled

A New York court has approved a $2.7-million settlement by Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. for stockholders who claimed they were placed at a disadvantage at the time ore was discovered in Ontario in 1964. Texas Gulf Sulphur and saveral of its ranking officers were charged by the Securities & Exchange Commission with nondisclosure and false and misleading information to stockholders about the ore discovery. The stockholders suits followed. Texas Gulf Suiphur agreed to the set-lement but denied any wrongdoing or liability.

Lyons Bid for Homburg Succeeds

J. Lyons, of Britain, is proceeding with its takeover bid for the Dutch meat products manufacturer Homburg NV. as more than 90 percent of Homburg's outstanding shares have been rag-istered for exchange. Under the agreement Lyona will pay 110 guilders cash for each common "B' share of Homburg. The company says it will acquire the Homburg "A" shares and profit-

U.S. Opposition vs. Tacit Russian Approval

Finland's EEC Link Entangled in Politics

TELSINKI (AP-DJ).—Finland, clinging to a tenuous neurality in the shadow of the Rusian bear, is seeking stronger ties tith the West through a trada ink with the Common Market, thich is not exactly Moscow's avorite association, Logically, one would expect the Jnited States to back the Finaish hid and the Soviet Union to oppose it. But the fact is the United States opposes it while the Russians maintain a discreet and tacitly encouraging silence. That is just one of the puzzles and paradoxes facing Finland and fellow cotentia: trade orplians as the EEC enlarges. Britain, Norway and Denmark, members of the European Free Frade Association (EFTA), will be entering the EEC. The other ix EFTA members—Finland, iweden, Austria, Switserland, ortugal and Iceland—will not e joining. Their big problem is a wold losing trade ties with ritain, Norway and Denmark. Finland's plight-which is the economic power shift and the woes of the dollar are causing the United States to adopt a bizarre political stance in terms of ita traditional East-West aims. Finland has reaped many benefits as an EFTA member. The country has expanded its exports, modernized its economy and enjoyed a standard of living among the world's highest. All of this, however, will be threatened unless Helsinki can negotiate a satisfactory trade pact with the enlarged EEC, say businessmen, politicians and government offi-

As a nation of 4.6 million people, Finland derives an estimated 25 percent of its $10.5 billion gross national product from exports-up from 19 percent in 1958, before it joined EFTA. In that period, its exports have quadrupled. Britain, its biggest cus-tomer, takes 18 percent of its ex-ports, followed by Sweden with 16 percent. About 70 percent of its exports go to nations that will make up the expanded EEC.

Overshadowing every aspect of toughest-also shows how the Finland's politics and commerce is fts relationship with the Sovlet Union—Finland's third largest customer, absorbing 12 percent of its exports. And good relations with the Soviet Union are central to Finland's policy of neutrality, as every Finnish diplomat and government official takes pains to emphasize.

Given the Soviet Union's distrust of the EEC, Finland has declared that it can never become a full member lest the political responsibilities of membership compromise Its neutrality. What it seeks is a limited freetrade agreement that will protect. as nearly as possible, the ties it already enjoys with its EFTA partners, notably Erhain.

Given the East-West overtones of the issue, Finnish officials say they are "astonished" at U.S. objections to trade agreements be-tween the EEC and nations like Finland. The Americans say they object on principle to preferential pacts that violate the spirit, if not the letter, of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade

But U.S. political motives are involved too. The United States has long supported the EEC as a cornersione of a new European political unity. Some U.S. officials now express fears that the could dilute its political power by tying fuself up in too many special agreements with nations that decline to support its political aims.

Profit Gap Of 24 Firms Held Too High

U.S. Study Under Way For Rules Violations

WASHINGTON, April 12 (NYT).-Donald Rumsfeld, director of the Cost of Living Council, disclosed yesterday that at least 24 major companies with sales of $50 million or more each have apparently violated Price Commisslon regulations by raising profit margins above permissible levels.

He said that companies in apoarent violation of the stabiliza-tion program rules would be subject to sanctions, including price rollbacks and court action, unless they could "justify" the seemingly excessive profit margins.

No legal actions have yet been taken, nor were the companies identified.

The apparent violations wera discovered in a "proliminary re-view" of 104 quorterly earnings reports. Mr. Rumsfeld said that the fundamental control of prices is the regulation regarding profit margins. Firms are permitted to increase prices to cover increased costs if, and only if, such increases do not result in profit margins in excess of those established during tha base period"-a company's average profit margins in two out of the three previous years.

SJ far the commission has examined only 212 corporate reports ane, of these, only 105 were properly prepared. About 2,500 companies, accounting for about half of all sales in the nation, are requirad to aubmit reports.

Research Lag Cited in U.S.

By Richard D. Lyons WASHINGTON, April 12 (NYT). — Commerce Secretary Peter G. Peterson yesterday drew a bleek picture of domestic recearch and development efforts and offered a tentative outline of federal incentives to help U.S. industry update its technology.

Among the changes he men-tioned was the chift in patent policy that would allow prirate domestic companies to use, on a royalty basis, patents developed with federal funds.

Mr. Peterson underscored the bare statistics of the drop in the nation's surplus of exports, even in those high-technology ltems that had for years aided the nation in maintaining a favorable balance of trade, noting that in the last decade American investment in research and development in the nonmilitary sector was only half that of France, West Germany, Britain, Italy or Japan in terms of percentage of gross national product.

Since a time lag exists between research and development investment and its commercial yield, the secretary said that "the gap in our R&D effort in the 1960s might mean that now we may be at a threshold of our competitiva difficuities vis-à-vis the rest of the industrialized world."

"If we want to maintain our balance - of - payments position without further devaluations; we will have to innovate more effectively and intensely than we in recent years." acded.

Mr. Peterson spent two hours before a house subcommittee which has been holding hearings on the relationship between technology and economy.

Mr. Peterson sald, "We should explore a patent rights policy on government R&D contracts would reward the contractor for commercial exploitation of the technology."

He said an assistant was working out a plan "to achieve greater commercial utilization of government patents."

Today one of the oldest names in American banking opens a new banking operation in the financial capital of the world—the City of London.

At the new offices Wells Fargo will engage in all types of company and corporate banking and will do business in sterling and other Eurocurrencies to meet the short, medium and long term credit requirements of national and multinational companies and governments.

The new bank is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Wells Fargo Bank, the eleventh largest bank in the United States of America, and will have an issued share capital of £2 million.

Of particular interest to clients will be a young team of internationally trained bank officers, well versed both in financial practice and European languages. Additionally Wells Fargo will bring a specialised knowledge of banking and commerce in the expanding markets.

of California to the service of United Kingdom business and of Europe in general.

For one hundred and twenty years, almost to the day. Wells Fargo have specialised in the physical and intellectual defence of their clients' money. So they feel confident in tackling the complexities of the international financial market in general and the Common Market in particular.

From today, they welcome old and new clients at their newaddress.

On the diagramed hand East gambled with a four-heart opening, which suggests better hearts and less outside strength than a one-bid in that suit. South conrageously bid five clubs.

This contract could not be defeated. After a heart lead, giving the declarer two tricks in that suit, South would have had an easy time of it, but he could survive even if West was inspired to lead the spade queen, as he dia here.

After the spade lead East overtook with the king, just in case his partner might have been tempted to make the fatal shift to hearts, and the declarer could now assume that West held the diamond king-the ace-king of spades marked on his right was about the maximum for outside strength in a pre-emptive bidder's hand,

East then shifted to diamonds, and South ducked, resigning himself to defeat if East held a singleton diamond. But the fates were kind. East's king was guarded, and South took the third trick with dummy's diamond jack. After drawing two rounds of trumps, he cashed the queen of diamonds, discarded a heart from dummy on the diamond ace, and eventually ruffed a heart in the dummy on his road to 11 tricks. At the second trick East could have shifted to a trump. This was likely to give South two trump entries to dummy, and allow him to establish and use the fifth spade, but West could foil this plan by playing his club jack only when South played the

Declarer could still come out on top by leading low diamonds quickly from his hand toward the queen-jack, without drawing a second round of trumps. In that way, he could again maneuver for the heart ruff in dummy after a discard on the diamond

Let's try approaching the matter in a roundabout way. In honor of Logos College's last football game of the eeason, Gary Harkness, star running back (and the novel's narrator), takes up his girl friend's suggestion to get high on pot and see whether during the game his "sensory parts function in terms of football or dope." The result is predictable: "As I started out I felt unbelievably ponderous. My head was made of Aztec stone. I watched my feet go slowly up and down over the marvelous grass . . . I reached the huddle. I realized I didn't want to be with all these people. They were all staring at me through their cages. Hobbs [the quarterback] called a pass play. We broke and set. Somebody came at me, a huge individual in silver and blue. I fell at his feet and grabbed one shoe. I started untying the lace. He kinked away from me and went after Hobbs. I got up and walked off. I was exceedingly hungry."

Understandably enough, Logos's coaching staff is concerned about this "leaving the game incident." It devolves on Wally Pippich, the team's recently hired public-relations man, to investigate Gary's would-be problem. As Gary describes the interview, "Wally Plppich sat behind his desk, facing up into a sun lamp, a strip of Reynolds Wrap covering his eyes. . . . I liked the idea of talking with someone who could not see me. I watched his mouth as he spoke. It was extremely active, almost an animated cartoon, a visual guide to the soundmaking His month seemed to invent the words as well as speak them; it was as though he'd been raised among lip readers." And there we have it, almost exactly—the novel's epicenter and the rabbit in Mr. DeLillo's hat. There is the mouth of the publicrelations man working away on its own, a Disney Pinocchio brought to life by the Blue Fairy's wand. There are the words —"Gary, I'm going to level with you. . . Nobody leaves an intercollegiate event out of sheer appetite motivations."—the mindless effluents of the mouthcartoon.

In the same way, the mouth that tells the story of "End Zone" has acquired a life of its own, and the words it speaks are guides But the mouth has no brain to guide it; the mind that conceived the words has long since left the scene.

Thus each of the characters speaks a jargon that mocks its origins, a reduction to the absurd of what once passed for thought. York Times staff book critic.

Gary's girl friend, Myna prefers to stay sloppily fat because "Almost everybody has something stuck inside them. Inside me there's a sloppy emotional overweight girl. I'm the same Gary, inside and out. It's hard to be beautiful. You have an obligation to people." Anatole Bloomberg, Gary's 300-pound roommate ("I feel like an overwritten paragraph") is trying to "unjew" himself because he cannot bear his people's "enormous nagging historical guilt . of being innocent victims." Pip. nich the PR man believes in shaking hands ("handation") and building things up ("bigation"

Billy Mast is taking a course in "the untellable" and shouts "in German a lot" on the theory that "If any words exist beyond speech they're probably German words or pretty close." And Gary himself finds his only sustenance in the terminologies of football and nuclear holocaust—the languages of end zones. The end zones of language. . All of which may explain what

Mr. DeLillo is up to but leaves ont everything that makes his novel wonderful-the craft with which he builds the scenes that make the foregoing lines seem funny; the grace and humor of his own parrative voice: the football fantasies that would make even Alex Karras envious; the football game told in pure jar-gonese that makes up the exciting centerpiece of the novel; a pickup game played in the snow that ought to be placed in all textbooks on creative writing to demonstrate the art of building a scene-simply everything. In his first novel, "Americana."

Mr. DeLillo saddled his magniti-cent verbal talent onto a drayhorse of a plot about a disllu-sioned advertising man who sees West to capture the images of the American past on home movies of the mind. After reading it one entertained the hope that the author might some day find a vehicle worthy of his talent would find some ballast for his word balloons. With the writing of "End Zone" he has fulfilled that hope in the twinkling of an eve. rival places him among our best young writers. It makes our wonder whether there are any limits at all to his potential growth.

British Soccer Relations Way Ahead of Baseball

BLACKPOOL, England, April 12 (NYT).—The headquarters of the Football League, the "or-ganized baseball" of English soccer, occupies a comfortable three-story house down the beach from this seaside resort. The headquarters of the Professional Pootballers Association is situated in a dingy cubbyhole of the Corn Exchange building in grim industrial Manchester, about 60 miles away. But management and employees in Britain's most popular sport are much closer than their American counterparts, at least since going through their own version of the Curt Flood case almost a decade ago.

Their case, decided in the British High Court on July 4,
1963 (our Independence Day, says
Cliff Lloyd, secretary of the Players Association, which took the case to court), resulted in a typical English compromise—the local version of the reserve clause was amended and players and management set out to install a workable system to air grievances.

This has led to an "independent" tribunal, which doesn't quite use arbitration but rather gentle persuasion to decide Lloyd says the tribunal has been 'very, very successful" and agrees with Eric Howarth, assistant secretary of the Football League, that a player strike is unimaginable in British soccer.

Salaries Cause Disputes

Most of the disputes here arise from salary disagreements or player disenchantment with coaches who keep them on the hench. They often involve player transfers, but in England, trades are not a problem any more. On a transfer deed, three signatures are needed that of the club trading the player, the club receiving the player and the player. If the player refuses to sign, he can't be transferred. If a player agrees to be traded, he receives 5 percent of the selling price and in the last year there have been several individual transfer fees in England that have exceeded $500,000. If the player requests a transfer, he gets no money, but usually his team will arrange a deal. If the club is unwilling to part with a player, he can bring his case to the tribunal and if he shows reasonable motives for the trade, the club is forced to comply. But if the British players are nearly a decade ahead in labor relations, they are eight years behind their athletic American cousins in securing the financial fringe benefits. The minimum

Should the strike reach settlement prior to the owners' session Kuhn, the meeting still would be held to discuss the strike's ramifications and future impact on the game.

Yesterday, the chief negotiators in the strike reached an agreement by which $500,000 in surplus earnings from the pension fund would be added to pension benefits. It is halfway between the original proposa's of the two sides —the players' $1 million and the owners' nothing. However, Miller added: "The basic principle of bargaining still applies. Until there's an agreement on everything there's agree-ment on nothing."

But there can be no definite settlement until the pay-for-play issue is resolved. That matter revolves around the owners' destre to see the players suffer some loss from the strike and the players' desire to be paid for all games they play.

Late last night, each side had rejected the other's offer in this

BELGRADE, April 12 (UPI),-

The Belgrade organizers of the world chess championship have given American challenger Bobby Fischer until Friday to post a $35,000 guarantee that he will play. Otherwise, said championship director Milivole Molerovic. the match slated to start June 22 hetween Fischer and titleholder Boris Spassky of the Soviet Union definitely will be off.

"What we need is a cable from Fischer or the American Chess Federation that they will stick to the original financial arrangement, and a $35,000 deposit as a guarantee Fischer will take part." Molerovic said.

"We cannot wait any longer than Friday because of technical and other preparations we must take for the match to begin June 22," Molerovic said. A report yesterday which said that the Belgrade organizers have already defiaitely decided not to hold the first 12 matches of the 24-match event starting June 23 proved erroneous. The final 12 games are scheduled for Reykjavík.

ABA's Erving Signs to Make Big Jump: To NBA in 1975 Frazier is a guard for the New York Knicks of the NBA.

Julius Erving, who is playing for the Virginia Squires of the American Basketball Association ann was drafted by the Milwaukee Bucks Monday in the National Basketball Association college draft, has signed a five-year contract with the Atlanta Hawks of the NBA.

Does it sound confusing? It is. The new contract takes effect 1975. Bill Putnam, president of the Hawks, confirmed last night in Atlanta that the signing had taken place Sunday night after many weeks of negotiations, Although Putnam refused to comment on the terms of the contract, Erving's adviser, Irwin Wiener, said, "The contract was for well over a million dollars."

Putnam said Erving would play for the Hawks "at the termination of his contract with the Squires in 1975—or sooner if we can buy it from Virginia before then."

Erving, a 6-foot-5-inch rookie year $500,000 contract with Virginia last year, with the payments to be spread over seven years. He was a junior at the University of Massachusetts at the time and one of the nation's leading college scorers and rebounders.

In February, Erving changed agents—from Bob Woolf, a Boston lawyer, who had negotiated his contract with the Squires, Wiener, the manager of Walt Prazier Enterprises, a company that advises many athletes. Walt PARIS (IHT).—Michel Gyarmathy's family made cheese in n small moun-(IHT).—Michel Gyarmathy's tain village in Hungary. Mr. Gyarmathy, a round, short man whose sports jacket fits like a sausage casing, lives today in a Paris town house on which an astonishing amount of gold leaf has been employed. He is narrow-eyed, guttural, and amiably canny, with the deep seriousness of a man whose life is devoted to frolics. He is the director, designer and, since the death of Paul Derval in 1966, the hig theese, so to speak, of the Folies Bergère.

"Michel is very serious," says Liliane Montevecchi who is fur the first time leading the hrand-new Folies revue, "J'Aime a la Folie." A Parisienne who went to the United States with Roland Petit's com-pany some 15 years ago, she went intu Hollywood films ("I was the new Ava Gardner, but not for long") and TV and just did the Las Vegas Folies, also directed by Gyarmathy. In Paris, when she heard that she would do a sketch in which she played Catherine-the-Great who-disguiscsherself - as - a gypsy - in - order - to seduce - Casanova - and - troika - him back-to-Petershurg, Miss Montevecchi, a bubbly hrunette, could not repress a giggle.

"Michel was cross," she says. "He said, this isn't funny. It's history." Mr. G.'s shows are always full of history. Frédéric Rey, who hecame a nude dancer at the Folies in 1934 (Mistinguett smuggled him from his native Vienna in a hasket of ostrich plumes) has played Louis XIV. Quasimodo, a Faun, Don Juan and the Devil, all more or less in a state of undress. (Mr. Rey is still in the Polies line, though now as a dress extra.) Not that just any historical figure will do. "Marie-Antoinette is no good," Mr. G. says, drawing a finger across his throat in a cutting gesture. "The French feel ashamed of what they did to her. Marie Queen of Scots is all right." The Folies, which celebrated its 100th anniversary a bit precipitously during a luli in 1968 iit was only in 1914, according to the official Folies program, that the theater became devoted to revue, though It did open briefly as a music hall in 1869, only to go dark during the Siege of Paris. Befure that it was a mattress store) is built on tradition. "We must respect tradition," Mr. G. says.

There is the title tradition (always 13 sweeping up and down to disguise the fact that the stage is only 18 feet deep!, the huge cape tradition (Catherine the Great's, in velvet, ermine and gold, is 600 feet square, a savant mixture of sex and religion (a 1925 show featured both "The Perpetual Adoration" and "The Chastity Belt"), and a real swimming pool onstage. And then there are the terrific Gyarmathydesigned costumes, a sort of plumed Pelion un a rhinestone Ossa. Liliane Montevecchi has to wear a brace to keep her feathers

The show seems endless. "Its only defect," Mr. G. says, "is that it's too long. It's like a very heavy dinner, but that's what the audience wants. They like to feel they've got their money's worth, for

"In Italy recently a taxi driver told me I'd given him too much money. I feel Italy is honest because of that taxi driver.

Americans feel France is honest because of

The Folies is so steeped in tradition that t'a become nearty as solemn as npera. There is not a trace of camp and, in a world of crumbling values, toppling moral standards and decaying principles, the Polies Bergère has become a bastion of rectitude, the only theater whose shows are getting cleaner all the time.

The Folies, Mr. G. says, is very much a family show. It might, in fact, be considered a French Disneyland.

The show Mr. G. puts on in Las Vegas is a mini-Folies, but the nudes there are, to his distaste, definitely maxi. "I don't like that for Paris, It's indecent and it gives the women in the audience complexes. I don't want them to have complexes, I want them to say, I'm just as pretty as Sbe is.

Mr. G. got his Folies joh as a young man by throwing himself in front of owner Faul Derval as Derval was leaving his office and sketching on the pavement a brilliant and towering Folies decor. In his native Hungary, he had worked in operetta before coming to Paris for a week's visit, "I had no money to go back, that's why

The state of the s

Michel Gyarmathy

I stayed on," he says. During that first week, he of course went to the Folies Bergere:

"I was disappointed. It wasn't fastueur." This favorite Gyarmathy adjective, meaning gaudy, showy, given to display, might have been invented for the Folies. "The star was Mistinguett. Frankly, she wasn't very good, she wouldn't make it today."

The Folies no longer has stars. "It's more democratic this way," Mr. G. says, "and cheaper." Each Folies runs four years and seats (there are 1,800 of them) cost from $8 to $11. The company is poorly pald; an average chorine gets $12 a show. "That's not good." Mr. G. says, "but it's correct. It's less tiring than working in a store or a hairdresser's."

The jastueux Folies are not demodé these pallid days, Mr. G. says: "To the contrary. When so many women wear pants it is that much more delightful to see them in cripolines." He once tried to ban his girls from wearing pants offstage, but failed.

"Women follow the mode," be says with a shrug. "So do I. I wear a hippy necklace." He fingered a heavy gold chain around his neck. "But I am not a hippy."

Mr. G. did try once to put a little reality into the Folies, "I did a tablean of the bombing of Warsaw, with the Warsaw Concerto played in the background, The audience didn't like it. This isn't the place for that,"

The Folies audience is 80 percent American, Mr. G. says, "Americans always want to see two things: the Eiffel Tower and the Folies Bergere. I'm a practical man, I've put the Eiffel Tower in this show so they're both under the same roof. Mine is 18 meters high and it descends onto the heads of the audience, And it's prettier than the other one. It's pink."
